THE WHITE HOUSE BABIES.

Baby McKee a Very Interesting Child—His Sister and Cousin.

In spite of the repeated paragraphs regarding 'Baby McKee' a caller at the White House would find little 'Ben," as he calls himself, quite an interesting little baby, says the Washington Post.

From what the papers say one would imagine he was a large chill; but on being ushered into the large nursery that overlooks the western part of the grounds, our finds the little fellow seated before a bugs frame slate on which he is vainly conditions.

"BUCKS" AT THE DOG SHOW.

A New Variety of Society Man, Recently Developed.

Society always goes to the dog show, and you may see more pretty and welldressed women in an hour at the show than in a mile of the Broadway promenade, says the New York correspondent of the Pittsburg Post. You recognize at the dog show that fashionable New York has developed a peculiar type of manbood. He is a broad-shouldered, sturdy, well-appointed fellow, in lond English clothes, with unmistakable evidences of athletic training.

You meet members of the fashionable you must either belong to the fashionable

Members of the fashionable set do all

I know of helps to rescue the tenementhouse dwellers from moral degradation;
but the buck does none of these things, physical needs, and likes to kill time in the most scientific manner. He is an odd product of American civilization.
